THE FIGHT GOES ON!

Editor and party leader freed from jail and back in the struggle

JOHN MORSE, Editor of British Nationalist, together with John Tyndall, Leader of the British National Party, were released from Wormwood Scrubs prison in London on the 14th November, after serving 4 months each of two 6-month sentences for publishing material liable to stir up 'racial hatred', i.e. material in opposition to massed immigration into Britain. They return to the struggle unbowed and unrepentant, determined to fight harder than ever in the cause of the white people of Britain.

The two were imprisoned in July after facing charges brought against them under Section 5a of the Public Order Act, which concerns so-called 'incitement' to racial hatred. They were both given 12-month sentences by Justice Derek Clarkson at Southwark Crown Court. They appealed against these sentences and were successful in getting them reduced to 6 months each with 6 further months suspended. With full remission, they were eligible for release in mid-November.

The convictions against Morse and Tyndall were a scandalous indictment of our so-called 'democracy', under which we are supposed to enjoy the right of free expression. What the two men did in effect was write and publish articles and commentaries in this paper and in its allied publication, the magazine Spearhead, which were strongly critical of the pro-immigration policies of successive British governments and of the whole idea of turning Britain into a multi-racial society. In these writings the two were forced to say things which in places were not complimentary to some sections of Britain's racial minority communities. For this they were prosecuted on charges of 'race hatred' — despite the fact that some leading spokesmen of the Asian and West Indian coomunities in Britain have frequently said things publicly which have been at least as strong in condemnation of white people, and never been charged with any offence!

Both Morse and Tyndall were charged as a result of items appearing in British Nationalist, the former as Editor and the latter as collaborator and the one responsible for approving all the paper's contents. Tyndall was additionally charged as a result of items appearing in Spearhead magazine, of which he is publisher and Editor. Tyndall was given two sentences, to run concurrently, while Morse served the one sentence.

INSTRUMENTS OF SUPPRESSION

The Public Order Act, and its twin piece of oppression the Race Relations Act, are devices introduced by the authorities to silence all protest against the conspiracy to flood Britain with coloured immigrants. Those who have introduced these laws will of course claim that people still have a right to protest against these things but must not, in doing so, use language likely to stir up 'hatred'. Needless to say, what language is or is not likely to stir up hatred is very much a matter of opinion. In effect, white British people, such as the English, Scots, Irish and Welsh, are every day on the receiving end of public comments which they might construe as stirring up hatred, but they are not protected from such things in the same way that members of racial minorities are. In theory these laws apply to 'hatred' against any racial group, including indigenous ones, but in practice no coloured person has ever been prosecuted, let alone convicted, for stirring up hatred against British Whites!

Clearly, those who have been responsible for bringing in these laws know very well that their policy in trying to make Britain multi-racial has been a ghastly mistake. Instead of acknowledging this and setting about reversing it, by a programme of humane repatriation, they are now

Government pussyfooting over AIDS

THE GOVERNMENT, with great ostentation, has recently announced a massive nation-wide campaign to combat the dreaded homosexual disease AIDS. Over £20 million is to be spent on a programme of education, warning people, by means of TV adverts, about the infection and how best to avoid it. All this is an acknowledgement that AIDS is now reaching epidemic proportions.

But in fact all our rulers are doing is spending the taxpayer's money to rescue themselves from the consequences of their own folly.

For it was they, and their predecessors of the old gang parties, who years ago approved the bringing out of new laws legalising the loathsome cult of homosexuality and thus attracting from out of the closet the very perverts who today are the main agents of the spread of AIDS, which is now beginning to infect many sexually normal people.

We have always believed and proclaimed again and again that the legalisation of homosexual practices was a disastrous mistake and should be repealed. For years many would not listen to us, calling us 'bigoted', 'backward' and 'reactionary'. Now we have been vindicated — though the circumstances of this vindication give us no pleasure. We have always believed that homosexuality, being as it is contrary to the laws of nature, would eventually have retribution visited on it by nature. Now this has happened through the emergence of AIDS.

POLITICIANS' COWARDICE

But despite all the evidence of the desperate emergency that the AIDS epidemic has created, still none of the leading politicians of the day has the courage to speak out in favour of the restoration of the laws banning homosexual acts. This is no surprise, because the queers now form a powerful lobby: not only do they have votes but they command influential positions in society. Parliament is riddled with them, as are the press and the broadcasting services. Offending them could lead to the ruin of a politician's career.

'GAYS' HOLD TORCHLIGHT RALLY
Encouraged by permissive legislation, they are now out of the closet and arrogantly flaunting their perversions in public

So all the leaders of all the parties of Westminster dodge the issue. The most they are prepared to do is spend money trying to tackle the SYMPTOMS of the problem rather than deal with its CAUSE.

IMMIGRANT FACTOR

In addition to the factor of homosexual 'liberation', there is another factor which is also contributing to the spread of the AIDS epidemic. Thousands of AIDS carriers are pouring yearly into this country from the Continent of Africa, where AIDS is especially rife. It is estimated that no less than 5 MILLION people in Africa suffer from AIDS. This and the fact that immigrants from that continent are arriving here every day calls for special measures aimed at stopping the influx — if only for national health reasons and separate from any other good grounds on which to halt such immigration. Yet there have been no firm steps whatever taken to close this channel of infection. All the leading politicians are petrified of being branded as 'racist', though in fact the same strict controls would be justified if the AIDS carriers

TORY DECEIT

WE HAVE REPORTED at length in this issue on the claim of Margaret Thatcher and her government that they intend to wage some sort of a fight against the extreme left which now dominates so many of Britain's big cities. The people should not believe this pre-election propaganda for one second.

The truth is that the Tories are totally unable to stand up to these far left forces which they have to a large extent themselves allowed to become so powerfully entrenched. This is the case not least because the Tories are in fact already committed to many of the basic values of the political left — most noticeably multi-racialism but also the betrayal of our fellow Britons in Ulster, the acceptance and toleration of homosexuality, and so on. Consequently they have neither the moral authority nor the will to tackle seriously, let alone defeat, the subversion and intimidation of the left — practised for the past 7½ years under Toryism.

There is even an implicit lie in the term 'loony left' now in use by Tory politicians and press. This cosy little phrase is intended to imply that the marxist subversion of Britain is being carried out by a tiny few cranks, whereas it is in fact a highly organised, intelligently directed operation, extending from the Labour Party to the openly violent leftist fringe, and directing vast social forces in the fulfilment of a well thought out revolutionary strategy.

This operation is potentially capable of producing a level of insurrection and civil war in mainland Britain hitherto seen only in Northern Ireland. It can be defeated only by an equally highly organised and intelligently led movement of nationalism among the British people, capable of fusing the people into a united front, as militant in the cause of its own national and racial survival as the far left is in the cause of Britain's destruction.

When nations fall apart, the blame lies with their leaders. Decay and corruption start at the top. In no case is this more true than in that of Britain, whose steady decline into a third world-style slum threatened by communist revolution is a process which our present Tory rulers have in fact been abetting for years.

Now Mrs. Thatcher and the Tories want the electorate to believe that their weak, cowardly and inept government of the past 7½ years is going to conduct an effective struggle against this Frankenstein monster which is, to a considerable extent, of its own creation.

Britons of healthy patriotic instinct will blame these Tories and the entire ruling establishment of modern Britain, just as much as the far left, for our present national disintegration and decline. Indeed the old gang of politics should be blamed for the emergence of the far left, which is merely one of the more dramatic pathological symptoms of this national degeneration.

Britain needs, not just a new government, but a whole new order. This is what we of the British National Party seek to bring about.

OUR PAPER is opposed to the policy of making Britain multiracial. This does not mean, however, that we are hostile to the ethnic minorities. Those who feel angry at the effects of multi-racialism should direct their anger, not at the ethnic minority population, but at the politicians who are responsible for the problem.

MRS. THATCHER is reported recently to have been advised that more than 6 million people, most of them living in the big cities, are now directly affected by the activities of local councils dominated by the far left. It has been further suggested that potentially there would be more than enough votes among such people to win the next general election for the Tories. Now senior ministers such as Mr. Norman Tebbit and Mr. Nicholas Ridley, with the Prime Minister's full support, are said to be launching a 'crusade' against councils controlled by what they choose to call the 'loony left'.

It is certainly true that in recent years the far left, operating both through the Labour Party and extreme fringe groups seeking violent confrontation on the streets, has attained the status of a major political force in Britain. And there is no doubt of the power which these subversive elements from the political underworld have acquired, particularly from their dominance of local councils. Nor can there be any doubt of the tyrannical way this power is being exercised at the expense of the British people living under these authorities. Indeed this newspaper has, throughout the past 5 years or so, been reporting the activities of these red gangsters in detail.

But from the way Mrs. Thatcher and her fellow Tories are talking it would sound to many people as if they have only just discovered the existence of the 'loony left' and the excesses for which it has been responsible.

It would be pertinent for us to ask just where Mrs. Thatcher and her colleagues have been during these years in which the left has been consolidating its control over Britain's cities. The answer is of course that they have been the Government in power! For 7½ years they have been, supposedly, presiding over the nation's affairs as the alien, marxist and anti-British forces of which they speak have been on the scene, promoting mayhem within the inner cities and seizing their current position of domination over the Labour Party.

Yet now we hear that the Tories are about to conduct a 'crusade' against the very state of affairs that over these 7½ years they have allowed to develop!

What will interest the British people, where these matters are concerned, is not words but actions. Many Britons will scrutinise closely the record of the Tories in opposing the far left, and what they will in fact find is a long history of inaction while the left-wing loonies have been strengthening their hold.

It will be recalled that it was Mrs. Thatcher and her colleagues who presided over the inner city race riots in 1981 and 1985, the worst insurrections to occur for centuries in mainland Britain. The Tories' tenure of office has coincided with one of the worst breakdowns of law and order in British history.

SCARMAN

Mrs. Thatcher's response to the race riots of 1981 will also be recalled. This was to appoint the dripping wet liberal Lord Scarman to concoct a report denouncing British police and society in general for their 'racism' and advocating a policy for policing the riot areas which in effect amounted to no policing at all. In fact most knowledgeable police officers attribute what happened in Tottenham in 1985 directly to the recommendations of the Scarman Report following rioting in Brixton in 1981.

In addition to providing the green light for further rioting, the Scarman Report has in fact resulted in an escalation of crime in the inner city areas populated by large ethnic minority groups, since these areas have, due to Scarman, become largely no-go areas for the police.

We repeat again: Lord Scarman was appointed to make his report by Mrs. Thatcher's Tory Government, whose ministers now bemoan the collapse of law and order and try to blame it on Labour!

As for the activities of the far left Labour councils, the fact that these have been allowed under the present Tory Government for several years demonstrates nothing as clearly as the weakness and flabbiness of that government. It is said that when the cat is away the mice will play. What are we to think of the cat who is at home but still allows the mice to create mayhem?

Local councils are not sovereign bodies — if they were they would have to be regarded as independent states, with flags, armies and seats at the United Nations. In fact they are only departments of the existing national state, enjoying their powers upon the authorisation of that state. When such powers are flagrantly abused, it is up to the state itself to step in and over-rule those responsible for the abuses. This has not been done.

If, as apologists for the government might protest, the law does not empower it in certain areas to over-rule local government, that is surely a good reason for changing the law. The Tories have a big enough majority in the House of Commons to do this, but they have not so far done anything more than tinker at the problem.

These considerations apart, one might ask the question: how do these far left Labour councils, with such detestable policies, manage to continue to get elected?

The answer is of course that they continue to get elected because the Tories have offered the people no attractive alternative. With Tory economic policies creating one disaster after another for British industry and with well over 3 million people unemployed as a result, there is little incentive to those tired of bad local government under Labour to change their allegiance.

ALL COMMITTED TO MULTI-RACIALISM

Many of the worst evils in the far left-controlled cities and boroughs have been brought about by the exploitation of racial tensions arising from out of the flooding of these cities and boroughs by non-white immigrants. For instance, in the London borough of Brent the 'ethnic minority' population now comprises a huge part of the electorate, and local politicians are frantically anxious to court the 'ethnic minority' vote, this resulting in many of the policies of discrimination against and harrassment of the native Whites, such as the hounding of local headmistress Maureen McGoldrick for making an alleged 'racist' remark to a colleague.

Yet when we look beneath the surface of current Tory rhetoric to see what the Tories have done to ease this problem we find that it has done nothing whatsoever; on the contrary, the government has been as anxious as any of its opponents in parliament to promote multi-racialism.

While Tory newspapers and Tory ministers have been condemning Labour councils for 'anti-racist' witch hunts, the government-controlled department of the Director of Public Prosecutions was quietly prosecuting and securing the imprisonment of our own Editor John Morse and BNP party leader John Tyndall for speaking out against immigration and multi-racialism.

While in the meantime the same government has been quietly putting through parliament a new 'public order' bill intended to give police additional powers to hound and

This is Britain after 7½ years of Tory rule. Mrs. Thatcher wants us to believe that she can defeat these forces which her own weakness and cowardice have allowed to take hold.

YOUR LETTERS

Sir, — It goes without saying that the 'establishment' is now terrified at the popularity of the BNP. For it to use four non-Anglo-Saxon lawyers to do the dirty work of prosecuting two true Brits shows that sick and demented minds are at work in the corridors of power.

The sooner we take back control of our own country the better.

I reiterate the words of David Owens of Leeds (who has himself suffered at the hands of the 'law' that now kow-tows to ethnic minorities and persecutes indigenous Britons): ''You can jail us, but you cannot stop us!''

JIM HAYES

Sir, — Tyndall's moral and physical courage is an inspiration to all British nationalists.

G. APPLEBY-JONES

Sir, — How easy is it today to buy British? I find it increasingly difficult in my area. Half the population is now 'ethnic minority' and I am at my wits' end. I buy from British shops whenever I can but of about 20 locally there is only one where I can get soft drinks or even food.

I do not blame the aliens for this; I blame the local morons who dutifully patronise their stores instead of buying from their own kind.

It makes me very sad to have only one British newsagent, and even he isn't allowed to sell chocolate or sweets by the local council (Tower Hamlets) because they discriminate in favour of the alien shopkeepers.

A. PATRIOT

Sir, — I was sorry to see you in your recent position. You didn't deserve it. I saw many of my comrades die in the great battles that we, the Red Devils of the Parachute Regiment, fought in the last war. It is a great betrayal of those gallant men that the likes of you could be imprisoned for opposing an alien invasion of this country.

I remember a German officer (of the 10th Panzer Regiment, which we captured) telling me that after the war disaster would befall Britain and he felt sorry for us when he thought about it. I laughed at the time, never dreaming his prediction would come true.

Anyway, I and scores of my mates salute you for your courage. One day the tide will turn, and when that day comes we hope the traitors will be brought to book.

THE FIGHT GOES ON

trying to force the consequences of their great error down the throats of the British people by making them terrified to oppose the multi-racial madness.

WE CARRY ON

Messrs. Morse and Tyndall do not intend to be intimidated, despite their unfortunate experience. They will carry on with their activities of opposition to immigration and multi-racialism with the same vigour as ever. Naturally, it will be necessary for them to be more careful than in the past over their use of words in this regard. We say this, not out of any apology for words used previously, but only out of the necessity to stay out of prison. We cannot serve the cause to which we are dedicated if we are languishing in a jail cell!

British Nationalist could not be published with the normal regularity in John Morse's absence, although, thanks mainly to the efforts of stand-in Editor and party Leader Richard Edmonds, two issues did appear. Now, however, the paper will revert back to monthly publication, as in the past. Likewise, Spearhead, the publication of which had to be wholly suspended in John Tyndall's absence, will henceforth appear every month.

In the last issue of British Nationalist printed prior to the jailing of the two men, it was stated: "We will not be silenced!" This remains the position. The jailing of Morse and Tyndall has not weakened our resolve but only strengthened it. Our cause is just. Our eventual victory is certain. The fight goes on!

ON-TRICK

persecute so-called 'racists', i.e. opponents of a black Britain.

One of the victims of the totalitarian 'anti-racist' policies of local councils which Tories have been attacking was Bradford headmaster Ray Honeyford, who was hounded out of his job for writing an article in a Tory magazine not pleasing to the 'anti-racist' witch hunters. Yet when Mr. Honeyford lost his headmaster's post neither Mrs. Thatcher nor any other of the leading Tories were heard speaking a word in his defence or in condemnation of those who sacked him.

The climate in which the extreme left has been able to practise its intimidation with such success has developed under a Tory Government which claims to be committed to "individual freedom under the law." In all the cases of intimidation and persecution that have arisen during these last few years the Tories have said little and done even less. They have mostly failed to speak out, and almost entirely failed to act, because the great majority of them, and certainly all the leading ones, are cowardly political opportunists with their eyes constantly cocked for votes. Where taking action against a case of left-wing council intimidation in cases with racial undertones might risk the loss of immigrant votes, the Tories will distinguish themselves only by inaction. Yet when they scent a general election coming up in which white majority votes might be important they have the nerve to pretend that they now are determined to 'do something' to halt the activities of the loony left!

HONEYFORD WITH WIFE
Where were Tories while he was being hounded out of his job?

THE ONLY BULWARK

In fact the only forces in Britain genuinely prepared to stand up and oppose the far left have been the forces of British Nationalism, best exemplified by the British National Party. Repeatedly, the BNP has stood its ground in the face of left-wing intimidation, asserting its right to hold meetings and, where necessary, defeating the left physically in defence of that right.

In the coming election the British people must not be 'conned' into thinking that the Tories offer any defence against the intimidation and excesses of the far left bullies. The whole record of the Tories in the face of these phenomena has been one of cowardice and retreat.

Only under the banner of British Nationalism will a movement of true resistance to the red threat be organised, and only under that banner will such a movement be victorious. Let the people give that movement a great push forward at the next election by voting BNP!

DAY OF DEGRADATION

THE PICTURE ABOVE is of a part of the National Front column 'marching' through London on the party's annual Remembrance Day parade on November 9th.

The sight is not only an insult to Britain's war dead, it is a disgrace to the cause of nationalism.

The picture was taken by a cameraman from a leading Fleet Street newspaper. No doubt he wanted to snap the worst-looking part of the column and therefore focussed his camera gleefully on this load of yobs, including two swigging from beer cans. No doubt there were some people in the column who presented a better appearance whom the paper declined to show in its pages the next day.

But the very fact that specimens like these were allowed on the march at all — ANYWHERE — is an appalling reflection on the standards and ill-discipline now prevailing in the NF.

STANDARDS OF THE PAST

Many of us were proud to be in the Front in the 1970s and we remember with a genuine glow the great Remembrance Day parades the party held then. In those days, when John Tyndall was leader of the NF, great care was taken on these solemn occasions to ensure that all taking part were decently dressed and carried themselves in a manner befitting the dignity of the occasion.

And if garbage like this shown here turned up wanting to join the march they were curtly told to get lost.

Not so today, it seems. Desperate to boost the sagging numbers of their followers the present Front chiefs will tolerate any flotsam or jetsam that will turn up.

There must be many decent Front members who are as digusted with these standards as we are.

The question is: how much longer are they prepared to go on putting up with them?

LORDLY REVOLT

As a long-time opponent of Britain's membership of the European Community, I was heartened that a number of peers, led by the redoubtable Lord Denning, former Master of the Rolls, spearheaded the attack against the Government's European Communities (Amendment) Bill, the purpose of which was to incorporate into British law a body of new EEC legislation. Unfortunately, Lord Denning and his fellow peers were unsuccessful in their attempt to prevent the Bill becoming law, but at least their action shows that not all peers share the pro-alien stance adopted by people like Lord Scarman.

The new Act implements the provisions of the Single European Act agreed by Mrs. Thatcher in Luxembourg last year. As Lord Denning so pertinently said, the Single European Act will ensure that "our courts will not be Her Majesty's courts, but European courts manned not by English judges but by European judges carrying out European law." I wonder what would have happened to John Tyndall and John Morse had their trial been held after the enactment of this legislation. Would we ever have seen them again?

This new Act has sinister implications. It has recently been revealed that the EEC Commission's case against Britain's zero-rated VAT on new buildings, recently heard at the European Court of Justice, was held in secret. This prompted Lord Denning to demand that all Community law ought to be like that of Britain so that pleadings were made available to all interested parties. Even a Labour peer, Lord Paget, complained that not only had British justice been handed over "to alien courts but we now learn it is a secret tribunal." In my opinion, it's high time that the British people rose up and cast off the shackles imposed upon them by the EEC.

PRINCELY CONCERN

It was with wry amusement that I read that Prince Charles shares Mr. Michael Heseltine's view that tax relief on mortgages should be phased out and the revenue thus accrued should be spent on the riot-torn inner cities. This prompts me to suggest that if His Highness really is so concerned about the plight of the inner cities he should part with some of the enormous assets belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall so that they can be used to help rectify the situation.

THE PRINCE
Why doesn't he give towards inner cities?

MULTI-RACIAL MADNESS

Any nationalist who has followed the fluctuating fortunes of Miss Maureen McGoldrick, the headmistress of Sudbury Infants' School, who has been suspended by Brent Council for allegedly making a 'racist' remark, will have little sympathy for her.

Miss McGoldrick claims that she has gone out of her way to support the 'anti-racist' policies prescribed by the Council, and her lawyer claims that she has "a splendid record of anti-racism." Even the school secretary points out that Miss McGoldrick wears a sari when attending Asian festivals! It sounds to me as if she's getting her just deserts for her folly.

What this silly lady doesn't seem to realise is that those who wish to impose the multi-racial madness on us will never be satisfied, however much people may bend over backwards to accomodate their loony ideas.

MISS McGOLDRICK
Desperate to be seen as good multi-racialist

The ordeal experienced by Miss McGoldrick is unfair and unfortunate; but the real victims of this tragic tale are the white children at her school, where 80 per-cent of the pupils are coloured.

QUOTES

Thus if on the one hand human societies are called equal, and on the other we find some of them frivolous, others serious; some avaricious, others thriftless; some passionately fond of fighting, others careful of their lives and energies; it stands to reason that these differing nations must have destinies which are also absolutely different, and, in a word, unequal.

NOW OUR OWN UNION JACK is being given a low profile because it is considered 'offensive' to some members of the ethnic minorities. Earlier this year BNP Bromley Organiser Alf Waite purchased from W.H. Smiths a booklet on pensioners' rights published by Age Concern and bearing the national flag on the cover. A few months later he saw the same booklet on display but with no Union Jack. On enquiry, he was told that the flag had been removed at the best of the 'ethnic' population!

We believe that 3 measures must immediately be applied if the AIDS crisis is to be properly tackled. These are:-

(1) Repeal of the laws permitting homosexual acts and additional legislation to close down all homosexual organisations and prevent the making of propaganda in support of homosexuality.

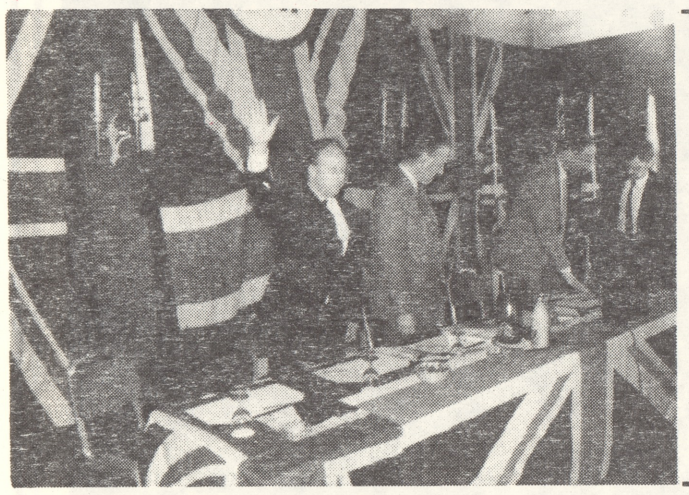
(2) The placing of all persons of known homosexual disposition in compulsory quarantine until the AIDS virus has been eradicated.

(3) A ban on all further immigration from those areas of Africa where AIDS is rife — this to go hand-in-hand with a general ban on non-European immigration.

These measures, particularly the second, may strike some people as drastic. But the fact is that AIDS has created a state of emergency that calls for drastic action. A grave danger to public health exists which could, if not tackled firmly now, escalate into an outbreak similar in its scale to the Great Plague which wiped out a large part of this country's population. Beside the need to guard the nation against this possibility, 'rights' of sexual perverts or immigrants are very much a secondary consideration. National survival is at stake, and nations which faced with such a crisis are not prepared to take all necessary measures to cope with it deserve to perish!

WELCOME BACK!

A HIGHLY EMOTIONAL 'Welcome to freedom' rally was held in London on November 15th to greet John Tyndall and John Morse on their return from prison. The rally was deliberately organised the day after the two men's release in order to emphasise their determination to be back in the fight with the very minimum delay.



LEADER RETURNS John Tyndall acknowledges the enthusiastic greeting of the audience. On the right is his co-prisoner, our Editor John Morse.

It was feared that because of the congestion of the party calendar around October and November only a small number would attend the rally. This fear proved in the event to be groundless. Around 200 turned up and gave the two recently released men a terrific welcome.

John Tyndall, making his first speech on his return as party leader, spoke of the way he and his colleague had made the most of their stay 'inside'. Mr. Tyndall himself used the time to write a book, which will be published some time next year and will provide a comprehensive presentation of the case for British Nationalism.

Mr. Tyndall paid tribute to Richard Edmonds and Alf Waite and others who had kept the party running in his and John Morse's absence and he stressed how the smooth functioning of the BNP in this crisis was a testimony to its inner strength.

Mr. Tyndall ended his speech by saying that history has provided numerous examples of today's 'jailbirds' becoming tomorrow's rulers. It was also a fact, he said, that today's jailers could tomorrow find themselves in jail. The party, he said, was not like its opponents, who wanted to gag and imprison all those who disagreed with it, but in cases where members of our ruling establishment had committed wilful treason against the British nation and people a day would come when they would get their just punishment.

NATIONAL RALLY BEST EVER

RONALD RICKCORD reports

Two days before The City's much heralded 'Big Bang', British Nationalism's own version of the event took place. I refer to the magnificent rally held by the British National Party in Central London as a protest against the imprisonment of John Tyndall and John Morse. The two Johns may not have been present at the rally, but they were certainly there in spirit, and this was very much felt by the large number of nationalists present.

The rally was undoubtedly the best nationalist meeting I have attended since the mid-1970s, and I'm convinced that it marks a turning point in the fortunes of the BNP. It's becoming increasingly apparent, and not only to nationalists, that the establishment lackeys made a serious miscalculation when they brought their malicious prosecutions against the two patriots. Throughout the proceedings I sensed a groundswell of fury and outrage against the sentences, and this mood was not allayed by the reduction of the sentences resulting from the appeals.

What I found particularly gratifying during the afternoon's proceedings was the high calibre of the new people joining the party.

RED MOB ATTACKS LONE B.N.P. PAPER SELLER

SINCE ITS FORMATION, Leicester Branch of the British National Party has exercised its lawful prerogative of selling British Nationalist in the city centre. On Saturday, the 18th October, a mob of about 60-70 political opponents of the party attacked one lone BNP paper seller who had arrived early at the usual site in Horsefair Street, at the side of Leicester Town Hall. He was recognised by some of the mob, was subjected to the usual sick verbal abuse, then physically attacked by the 'braver' mobsters, and was dragged to the ground and kicked repeatedly. He had a lucky escape, sustaining minor cuts and bruises.

ACTIVITY STEPPED UP

The Leicester Branch has always been very active, but after the outrageous imprisonment of party leader John Tyndall and British Nationalist Editor John Morse it has further increased its efforts in the promotion of the party. As a direct result of this, Leicester City Council's controlling Labour group has issued various memos expressing concern about the growing presence of the BNP in the city.

One estate in Leicester which has received a great deal of attention from the BNP over the past two years — leaflets, paper sales, etc. — was chosen as a possible site for a 'residential college, mosque, library, printing press and other facilities'. Such has been the success of the BNP campaign in this area, called Beaumont Leys, that more than 200 white residents turned up to a public meeting to oppose the proposed 'Mini-Islamic University' being planned.

It is most certainly the spread of nationalist literature in Beaumont Leys that has moved the Labour marxists to crawl out from the sewers. It is also certain that the Labour Party was responsible for stirring up the red maggots who attacked the BNP paper seller.

Such attacks will not stop the spread of nationalist literature. Rather does it serve to increase the resolve of BNP members. Leicester Branch is going to step up efforts in all areas of activity.

GLASGOW

BNP beats meeting ban

GLASGOW B.N.P. thwarted an attempt to stop its annual St. Andrew's Day rally on November 29th. The owners of a local public house hall which had been the original venue of the rally bowed to opposition threats and cancelled the booking less than an hour before the rally was due to start. Eric Brand and his local activists rose to the occasion, however, and quickly found alternative accomodation for the rally.

The rally, which was addressed by John Tyndall along with Stuart Millson and Gus McLeod, was dedicated to the theme of opposition to the Anglo-Irish Agreement. Despite a reduced attendance due, as with the York parade, to congestion of the party calendar, it made big local press and TV headlines.
